Christopher Powell appeared in court Wednesday to answer to the charges that he murdered Corey Thompson as Thompson's sister, Patricia Russell, held back her emotions. / POOL

DA: Newbury St. stylist was left stabbed under highway

Fatal stabbing. The sister of a South End man found under a highway ramp said she doubts that his murder will ever make sense.

As a prosecutor told a judge how an Everett man allegedly stabbed a Newbury Street salon stylist eight times and then left him under an interstate ramp, the accused nodded his head up and down before burying his head in his hands.

Christopher Powell, 39, of Everett, was ordered held without bail during his arraignment for murder. Powell was arrested Tuesday, about a month after a passerby discovered the body of 44-year-old Corey Thompson on a gravelly plot of land under an Interstate 93 ramp near Albany Street.

Assistant District Attorney Edmond Zabin said the two men got into a fight during which Thompson punched and assaulted Powell. The fight was captured on video surveillance.

As Zabin told the judge that at some point Powell pulled a knife and stabbed Thompson eight times in the torso, Powell nodded his head and mouthed "I love you" to his mother and girlfriend who attended the hearing.

According to court documents, video surveillance from a nearby apartment building showed Thompson in a verbal and physical fight with Powell. Troopers investigating the incident interviewed three witnesses who said they saw the two running near Harrison Avenue and William Mullins Way at about 5 a.m. Feb. 25. The witnesses said they saw Thompson punch Powell and Powell shout, "Don't hit me. I'll give you the money."

Powell's blood was found on a fence near the area where Thompson's body was found and on a door handle of Thompson's car.

Lawyers would not comment on how the two men knew each other.

When troopers arrested Powell, he told them he was taking Oxycodone.

Powell's attorney suggested that his client acted in self-defense.

"There appears to be an issue of self-defense, even from what the prosecutor mentioned," said Attorney Michael Bourbeau. Thompson, who lived in the South End, worked at a posh and popular Newbury Street salon, according to his obituary.

Family reaction

Thompson's sister and niece attended the court hearing. When asked before the hearing what it would be like to see the man who allegedly killed her brother, Patricia Russell hesitated, then answered.

- "What I want to do [to him] I don't think they'll let me," she said, adding that it had been a while since she talked to her brother. "I'm hoping it'll make sense, but I don't know if it ever will."
- Both his sister and niece described Thompson as a well-liked person who had many friends.

Roxbury Community College will work to improve its training regarding safety responses in the wake of the report.

Report: 'Serious deficiencies' at Roxbury college

College probe. The report criticizes school officials for their failures and lack of understanding.

The security policies at Roxbury Community College will be strengthened and ethics and security training of faculty and staff will be improved after a report confirmed "serious deficiencies" at the school that led to an inability to properly respond to crimes on campus, including sexual assaults.

Failures by school administrators over the handling of allegations of sexual assaults on campus were detailed in a report released yesterday. The report by lawyers at the Boston firm Goodwin Proctor was requested by the college's Board of Trustees after former President Terrence Gomes stepped down this past summer amid state investigations.

"Counsel also finds that there were serious deficiencies in RCC's controls, policies, training and organization that left the college ill-equipped to properly respond to incidents of crime — including allegations of sexual assault — on campus," lawyers wrote in the report.

The report criticized the school and administrators for lacking the knowledge of their obligations under federal laws to investigate, report and take corrective action in response to allegations of sexual assault.

Also detailed in the report, which is available on the school's website, is that evidence showed the school may have given financial aid to a student in exchange for her silence over allegations of sexual assault by a professor.

Improvements coming

Kathy Taylor, the board's chair, said that the school is already implementing changes.

- She said most of the board's members were appointed within the last few months and that the college is looking for a new president.
- "One of the major goals of this board is to restore credibility to Roxbury Community College through accountability and transparency, and that starts today," she said.

Brain drain. Officials want to keep local talent

It's no secret that Boston and Cambridge are home to some of the world's most elite colleges and universities, an attribute that attracts thousands of students each year.

Sounds great, but there's a downside — half of them earn their degree, then exit to the left.

That's why coalition of city and educational leaders are holding a Mass. Talent Retention public hearing tonight on how to convince local talent to stay put.

"We want to make sure that we keep the young, vibrant talent here," said Boston City Councillor Tito Jackson, who is spearheading the push to stop what is known as brain drain. "The paradox of being a hub is that it is something that everyone goes to, but also something that everyone leaves."

Some of the issues that drive Boston students out of town relate to employment, transportation, housing and lifestyle, according to Michael Lake, executive director of World Class Cities Partnership.

"Historically it's been about cost of living issues," said Lake. "But we're losing talent to cities that are far more expensive than Boston. So the question then becomes, what is the reason?"

The public hearing will run from 5-8 p.m. at the Cahners Theater in the Museum of Science.

MORGAN ROUSSEAU

By the numbers

There are roughly 160,000 college students in Boston and Cambridge, and about 6.5 percent of Boston's workforce are employed at colleges and universities.

More than 50 percent of college graduates leave Boston each year, although roughly 90 percent of graduates who originate from the area stay. About one-third of Bostonians are between the ages of 20 and 34

Blaze damages two Dorchester businesses

Firefighters put out a four-alarm blaze that damaged two businesses on Harvard Street in Dorchester Thursday morning. The fire broke out around 11 a.m., and spread from a restaurant to a laundromat, causing an estimated $500,000 in damage. Firefighters extinguished the blaze within 15 minutes. Fire officials said there were no injuries, and the cause remains under investigation. / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

CIA. Petraeus says he's sorry for affair, moves to mend image

Former CIA Director David Petraeus apologized yesterday for the extra-marital affair that forced his November resignation and acknowledged the toll it took on his family, career and reputation.

His appearance at an event honoring University of Southern California veterans and Reserve Officers' Training Corps students was his first public speech since the storied Army general's career was cut short by the scandal.

Petraeus noted that "life doesn't stop with such a mistake. It can and must go on."

"I know that I can never fully assuage the pain that I inflicted on those closest to me and on a number of others," Petraeus said.

"I can, however, try to move forward in a manner that is consistent with the values to which I subscribed before slipping my moorings and, as best as possible, to make amends to those I have hurt and let down." REUTERS

Sheriff releases Gabby Giffords shooting papers

The sheriff's office that responded to the 2011 mass shooting attack in Tucson, Ariz., that wounded former Congresswoman Gabrielle Giffords, released more than 2,700 pages of documents on yesterday related to its investigation, an official said.

The release of the records comes just over four months after Jared Lee Loughner, 24, a college dropout with a history of psychiatric problems, was sentenced to life in prison for committing the rampage that killed six people and wounded 13 others, including Giffords.

The trove of documents released by the Pima County Sheriff's Department includes transcripts of witness accounts, calls to emergency responders and case reports from the dozens of detectives and officers who responded to the shooting, said Deputy Thomas Peine, a spokesman for the agency.

No photos are included in the release because the department is still reviewing them, Peine added. REUTERS

Supreme Court still debates marriage law

Same-sex marriage supporters demonstrate in front of the Supreme Court yesterday. / GETTY IMAGES

DOMA. Highest court continues discussing striking down law denying federal benefits to same-sex couples.

Supreme Court Justice Anthony Kennedy, a potential swing vote, warned of the "risks" that the Defense of Marriage Act infringes upon the traditional role of the states in defining marriage.

The 1996 U.S. law denies married same-sex couples access to federal benefits by defining marriage as between a man and a woman. Kennedy referred to DOMA as "inconsistent" because it purports to give authority to the states to define marriage while limiting recognition of those determinations.

On the liberal side of the bench, Justice Sonia Sotomayor and Justice Elena Kagan echoed some of Kennedy's concerns about the states' rights issue.

"What gives the federal government the right to be concerned at all about the definition of marriage?" Sotomayor said. Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg also raised concerns about the law, stressing how important federal recognition is to any person who is legally married. Comparing marriage status with types of milk, Ginsburg said that a gay marriage endorsed by a state, but not recognized by the federal government, could be viewed as the equivalent of "skim milk."

The law is the focus of a second day of oral arguments before the high court. It is possible the court would not reach the wider issue in the DOMA case because of preliminary legal matters relating to whether the court can hear it.

On that issue, conservative justices criticized the decision by President Obama to abandon the defense of DOMA and question his willingness to defend other laws passed by Congress and challenged in court. "It's very troubling," Kennedy said. REUTERS

Web slowed by biggest cyber attack in history

Internet hacking. The war between Spamhaus and Cyberbunker is derailing the 'net.

Kamphuis claims his group's retaliation is over but Internet users can expect ongoing difficulties. / SPAMHAUS

The biggest cyber attack in history is slowing Internet speeds around the world as hackers take on spam-fighting group Spamhaus. Netflix is among the sites severely affected.

Spamhaus claims to have been under attack for a week, following a decision to flag the Cyberbunker site as hosting spam. Spamhaus CEO Steve Linford said the Distributed Denial of Service attacks are unprecedented. "Attacks are peaking at 300 gigabytes per second. … Attacks against major banks, we're talking about 50," he said, adding this was enough to disable government networks.

The attack is retaliation for Spamhaus' abuse of power, according to Sven Olaf Kamphuis, who claims to represent Cyberbunker. "We are not spamming, and in any case they are not authorized to sabotage companies," Kamphuis said. "Their blacklist works as a form of blackmail by publishing personal details." REUTERS

Guilty. Lawyers for the Colorado movie theater gunman plead guilty

Defense attorneys for the 25-year-old man accused of killing 12 people in a shooting rampage at a Denver-area movie theater have offered to have him plead guilty in exchange for a life prison term, according to court documents made public yesterday.

Lawyers for James Holmes say in the court papers that prosecutors have not yet responded to their offer, which would spare their client the death penalty. Holmes is scheduled to be in court on Monday for a hearing in the high-profile case.

A spokeswoman for the Arapahoe County District Attorney's Office could not immediately be reached for comment. REUTERS

1 McHale and Oscars: Not yet

Joel McHale doesn't expect to be hosting the Oscars next year, even if his fans think he's perfect for the gig. "They're not going to call me," McHale said during an interview with Larry King, responding to a fan-submitted question about whether he'd entertain the thought of hosting the Academy Awards. "Would I entertain the thought? I just entertained it. I was very entertained. So was the thought. The thought was like, 'This was a great time.'"

Female NBC reporters come out as couple

Just in time for the arguments the Supreme Court is hearing on gay marriage, two bold-faced names came out of the closet: Jenna Wolfe, the weekend anchor on the "Today" show announced yesterday that she is in a relationship with fellow NBC journalist Stephanie Gosk — and the two are expecting a baby girl in August. "Something just sort of told me it was time. Two years into a great relationship we felt like we wanted to share our adventures with a wide-eyed, little person," she wrote on a newly created blog for the show, where she will chronicle her adventures in pregnancy and parenting. "The more we talked about it, the better the idea seemed. And so in December, we embarked on Operation Baby. And might I just add that despite the morning sickness, it's been the best decision we've ever made."

Hayden Panettiere has secretly gotten engaged to her much, much taller Ukranian boxer beau, Wladimir Klitschko, according to Us Weekly. "Very few people know, and she isn't wearing her ring publicly yet," a source says. "Looks like a summer wedding." Panettiere and Klitschko split up in 2011 after two years of dating, and they have not officially confirmed they are back together, despite several public displays of affection over the past few months.

Meet Bieber's spit

Justin Bieber is facing battery accusations from a neighbor who claims he made threats during an argument near his Los Angeles home. It appears Bieber decided to take his new Ferrari for a spin around his gated community at speeds of up to 100 mph. His neighbor, who TMZ says is a 47-year-old and father of three, began to yell at Bieber for driving so fast. Bieber reportedly responded by spitting in his face and stating: "I'm gonna f-king kill you." If that guy has a 16-year-old daughter, she is going to be sooooo mortified.

Stay off my Hammaconda!

Jon Hamm is growing tired of the attention his private parts have been receiving (the tabloid press has hilariously dubbed it "the Hammaconda"). "Most of it's tongue-in-cheek, but it is a little rude," he tells Rolling Stone of the photos spread online of the outline of his crotch. "They're called 'privates' for a reason. I'm wearing pants, for f—'s sake. Lay off." Of course, the star doesn't want to come off as a complainer. "I mean, it's not like I'm a f—ing lead miner. There are harder jobs in the world," he says. "But when people feel the freedom to create Tumblr accounts about my c—, I feel like that wasn't part of the deal." Better than the alternative, Hamm. We could be talking about your Hammapillar.

You will love to hate Erica Cornejo in the Boston Ballet's latest. / ROSALIE O'CONNOR PHOTOGRAPHY

Awakening 'Sleeping Beauty'

Arts. Boston Ballet brings a lot of personality to a classic story.

"The Sleeping Beauty" is a familiar fairy tale, but Boston Ballet has found a way to make it feel new.

Set to a Tchaivosky score and choreography by ballet master Petipa, Fairy Carabosse (Erica Cornejo) is annoyed that she has been left out of the christening celebration of Princess Aurora (Misa Kuranaga). She gives the child a spindle as a gift, announcing that she will prick her finger on it and die. But not so fast — the good Lilac Fairy's (Lia Cirio) gift to the princess is that she not die, but fall into a deep sleep until she is awakened by a Prince's (Jeffrey Cirio) kiss.

This show has a lot of personality. The Lilac Fairy is a bold, fearless leader; the Songbird Fairy (Sylvia Deaton) shows a lighter, funny side, while the Golden Vine Fairy (Dalay Parrondo) means business. Carabosse is wickedly wicked — a character you love to hate. Kuranaga did her homework and captures all things pure and innocent about Aurora.

For a grandiose, romantic story ballet, the staging and music is delicate and inviting, as opposed to the Wang Theatre performances from several years back. An entire cast is bouncing and floating onstage, but all you can feel is the tremendous energy of the dancers and the silence around them. It's as if Boston Ballet is putting on a private showing for your eyes only. And that is the way a ballet should be experienced.

The climax of the story (the kiss) is at the end of Act II. Act III moves quickly but is more of a celebratory section with other fairy tale characters and a grand pas de deux.

'By the Way, Meet Vera Stark'

Friday through April 27
Lyric Stage Company
140 Clarendon St., Boston
$27-$58, 617-585-5678
www.lyricstage.com

In this new satirical comedy by Lynn Nottage, our titular heroine is an African-American maid with dreams of becoming an actress. She works for a successful white actress, and when the two of them land the respective roles you'd expect in an epic drama set in the antebellum South, well — the plot pretty much writes itself from there, doesn't it? Following the show on April 7, the Lyric will screen the film that inspired Lynn Nottage's search for Vera Stark, "Baby Face," starring Barbara Stanwyck and Theresa Harris.

'Master Class'

Sunday through April 21
Arsenal Center for the Arts, 321 Arsenal St., Watertown
$20-$58, 617-923-8487
www.newrep.org

This Tony-winning play by Terrence McNally examines opera star Maria Callas as she nears the end of her distinguished career. Over the course of a series of master classes she's teaching, she reflects on her life, successes and failures. The cost of fame takes center stage, focusing on the exaltation bestowed by achievement and taken away again by age.

‘Olympus’ writers: You can’t handle the truth

Quoted

“Obviously [White House officials] don’t tell you anything, but you use your imagination on what might be there. Then when we were in pre-production, we met with Secret Service people. And they told us a lot of what we had guessed and imagined was close to reality.”

Creighton Rothenberger, co-screenwriter of “Olympus Has Fallen”

Film. The screenwriters of “Olympus Has Fallen” talk about getting too close to the truth and discovering strange but true factoids about the White House.

“We don’t think anything like this could ever happen,” Creighton Rothenberger says with a smile. In his film, “Olympus Has Fallen,” which he co-wrote with his wife Katrin Benedikt, terrorists break into the White House, wipe out the Secret Service team and kidnap the president. But is this really so implausible?

In the film, Gerard Butler stars as the lone surviving Secret Service agent after the massacre and the only one who can save the day. Rothenberger and Benedikt acknowledge the obvious “‘Die Hard’ in the White House” line, and insist they were trying to one-up that film’s corporate skyscraper setting. “The kernel of the idea was what would be the most impossible building to take over in the world? And we said the White House. But how would you take it over?”

The terrorists are North Korean rogue agents. The main villain, played by Rick Yune, seeks revenge against a nation that has helped keep his country apart. “We wanted a villain whose mind-set was that he was in the right,” Rothenberger explains. “He thought he had a reason to lash out against the United States. He thinks he is the hero. But you have to stop him because, you know, we disagree.”

Rothenberger says that director Antoine Fuqua (“Training Day”) aimed to keep it “real” and “gritty.” But not too real. “When you see an action movie, obviously you suspend belief a little bit,” says Benedikt. “But you don’t want to be suspending belief every other minute. That takes you out of the movie. But I think you can get away with one or two [logic lapses].”

Actually, the two had to avoid certain things they discovered through research because they might sound too outlandish. “We learned that when a motorcade [from another country] comes into the White House driveway, they can’t question those guys,” explains Rothenberger. “They can’t go into their vehicles. They could have guns inside, yet because of diplomatic protocol you can’t check them out. We didn’t put that in there because no one’s going to buy that.”

Dwayne Johnson stars in "G.I. Joe: Retaliation." / JAIMIE TRUEBLOOD

10 Reasons to see a movie

1 'G.I. Joe: Retaliation' Reshoots on this Hasbro sequel to unkill Channing Tatum have resulted in not that much Tatum. This time, Marlon Wayans and Joseph Gordon-Levitt, though, are MIA.

2 'The Host' There are no more "Twilight"s to film, but there is a Stephenie Meyers novel about aliens — emo aliens.

3 'Temptation: Confessions of a Marriage Counselor' Another season, another Tyler Perry movie, this one about a marriage counselor's torrid affair with a cyber mogul. Co-starring Kim Kardashian because [insert joke here].

4 'Starbuck' This Canadian comedy, about a serial sperm donator who has fathered 533 children, was such a hit in its native Quebec that its director, Ken Scott, has already himself handled the American remake, with Vince Vaughn and Chris Pratt, due out this year. See it in French first!

5 'The Sapphires' Chris O'Dowd ("Bridesmaids," "The IT Crowd") stars in this dramedy about an all-girl group in the '60s comprised entirely of Aboriginal girls. According to the description, they proceed to "learn about love, friendship and war." Good for them!

6 'Reality' Matteo Garrone surprised not a few people when his follow-up to the crime saga "Gomorrah" turns out to be this satire about a fishmonger who winds up on the Italian version of "Big Brother."

7 'Spring Breakers' Selena Gomez, Vanessa Hudgens and Ashley Bensen dirt up their reputations as collegiates-turned-criminals in a T&A fest directed by Harmony Korine, whose last movie was "Trash Humpers." James Franco plays a grilled-out gangster named Alien.

8 'Olympus Has Fallen' The first of the year's "Die-Hard-in-the-White-House" pics is, alas, the one without any Channing Tatum.

9 'Ginger & Rosa' Filmmaker Sally Potter ("Orlando," "Yes") returns with this somewhat calmed down tale of adolescent female friendship, with young, talented Elle Fanning cast as Christina Hendricks' rebellious daughter.

10 'On the Road' Jack Kerouac's unfilmable novel finally gets filmed — and with KStew! Sam Riley and Garrett Hedlund play Sal Paradise and Dean Moriarty, who speed around America, visiting an all-star cast. Everyone's ignoring this film, but it's better than it ever had to be.

Horoscope

♈ Aries | March 21 - April 20. It isn't likely that you'll be deprived of rightful rewards or acknowledgement. You probably won't have to wait until the end of the day to receive them, either.

♉ Taurus | April 21 - May 21. Simply by adding a new twist to an old routine, you can make things fresh. Don't hesitate to use your imagination to brighten your world.

♊ Gemini | May 22 - June 20. Be alert for a rewarding opportunity to develop in a commercial involvement. It's likely to be fleeting, so be ready to jump on anything that's different.

♋ Cancer | June 21 - July 22. As long as there is parity between you and the other party, a friendly agreement will have excellent chances for success. Fairness evokes fairness.

♌ Leo | July 23 - Aug. 22. Being extremely inventive and resourceful, you could come up with a much better method for doing a repetitive task. Don't hesitate to innovate.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23 - Sept. 22. A well-calculated risk is likely to work out just as you envision it. However, be careful not to press it or the link between you and Lady Luck could snap.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19 - March 20. An interesting new acquaintance could enter your life. This new friend is likely to be introduced to you by an old pal. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Hey reader, leave that Metro alone

Re: "Hey Metro, leave those kids alone" (Metro, March 27) "Unhealthy obsession?" Letter writer N. Foster needs to take a chill pill. MJ's kids, like every other celebrity child, are talked about daily. I highly doubt Metro's article has any impact on them. Dorothy Robinson is just doing her JOB. I'm sure there are worse occupations out there than that of a gossip columnist. P.S. Dorothy: Keep up the good work. JESSICA JAY, VIA E-MAIL

Gratitude is the reciprocal of courtesy

RE: "Take a moment of silence for chivalry" (Metro, March 27) How about the females rushing to the subway car before the passengers get out from the car? How about the females who rush to the vacant seat close to a man and take it as entitled without even offering a smile or a thank you to the man? Women have to understand that if a man offers a seat to them, it is not because they are entitled it, but because of plain courtesy. So please start saying thank you. GEORGE THOMAS, VIA E-MAIL

Gail Scott doesn't want the "equal rights crap" because she doesn't believe in equal rights, but female superiority. Subway seats SHOULD be given up, by BOTH men and women, for the elderly, pregnant women, children and those with disabilities that require a seat for courtesy and decency, not for gender alone. We have heard women roar that they are equal to men, and I fully agree. So now women, as equals, can vote, run a Fortune 500 company, become president and enjoy the equality of fighting for a seat on the subway. DOUGLAS BROWN, VIA E-MAIL

HOW TO BECOME FEARLESSLY MARRIED — AND STAY THAT WAY

I am often asked, "Is there such a thing as a happy marriage these days?" Patients come in to see me and talk about all the failed relationships around them. They're frustrated and fearful of marriage as a result. People's attitudes seem to be, "Every marriage fails eventually, so what's the point?" This has a profound impact on their ability to even have a healthy relationship.

Their questions are rooted in fear of the unknown. People don't know exactly how marriage will turn out when they enter it, so they get anxious. There are things you can do to ensure a healthy relationship, even through differences and difficulties. These are my tried-and-tested tips to become fearlessly married:

Define a healthy marriage. If you wanted to open a coffee shop, would you model it after the dingy one on the corner or the thriving Starbucks? Rather than focusing on botched relationships, look at what works.

Enter the marriage 100 percent committed, without the divorce option. In relationships that stand the test of time, couples are entirely focused on keeping it and doing what's necessary to maintain it.

Disagreements are normal and don't mean the end of a relationship. Look at the big picture and ask yourself: Is it worth it to win the battle but lose the war? Accept certain things about your partner. Sure, it may annoy you that he leaves the toilet seat up, but in the end, does it really matter?

FEAR OF THE UNKNOWN CAN CAUSE ANXIETY IN A MARRIAGE. PHOTOOBJECTS.NET

Focus on what binds you, not on what separates you. You originally got together because of commonalities, not differences. Keep that focus while maintaining a sense of autonomy. The best relationships are those where both people do their thing and then come together and enjoy.

Take time out when there are arguments or fights. Issues are rarely resolved in the heat of battle, so walk away and agree to come together when things calm down. Examine your intent. Is it to hurt the other person or work toward a compromise? Avoid absolute words such as "always" or "never," as they seldom lead to a constructive conversation.

Plan a date night, e.g. movies, dinner. Have it in place early in the week so you can look forward to it.

The Spiced Pear offers an egg hunt of a different nature

Restaurants. Try Easter brunch at this classic Newport locale.

Newport's deluxe hotel Chanler at Cliff Walk and its restaurant, the Spiced Pear, celebrate their 10th anniversary this summer. By that time, you'll risk long waits and crowded conditions as the vacationing hordes fill the destination overlooking Easton's Beach. It would be smarter to plan a spring day trip, or perhaps an Easter brunch field trip.

Chef Thomas Duffy executes the menu with a playful approach. The Rhode Island native packs the menu with free-range and organic meats, as well as local often-organic produce, and spices it with a sense of fun. With his version of profiteroles, the unsweetened dough is cooked to a nice crispness and the bittersweet sauce has lots of natural spicy chocolate flavor. Both work perfectly for the super-sweet interior of, well, what is it? Dr. Pepper ice cream!

Chef Thomas Duffy may not offer as much candy as the Easter Bunny, but he does dole out Dr. Pepper ice cream! / OPTIONS PHOTOGRAPHY

SURE, PATRON'S A WATERING HOLE — BUT ONE WITH SOME SOPHISTICATED TEQUILA

We've been hearing about the development of Patron's Mexican Kitchen and Watering Hole for a few months now, as owner Marc Kadish has gradually transformed the former Big City pool hall into a new Mexican and tequila bar concept. If you expected a classier update on the frat-y Allston bar in line with many of the other recent, flashy tequila-centric bar openings, you'd be half right.

The back room has been remodeled into a much more attractive dining room: leather banquettes and two fire places provide a relaxed feel, with ornate mirrors, old clocks and art adorning the walls. A few pool tables remain, however, taking up the right side of the second-story space. The bar pushing outward from the center toward that side remains largely the same, which is to say: Allston-y.

Despite the conceptual focus on tequilas now, there is still a Jagermeister shot machine behind the bar, and an encouragement to ask about tequila Jell-O shots on the menu under the list of mezcals.

The existence of that list is encouraging all the same, ranging from approachable and popular mezcals, like the Monte Alban silver — lightly smoky, slightly astringent, with notes of banana peel — and Ilegal reposado with its smooth caramel. There are also slightly more sophisticated styles, like the much smokier, sharper, Del Maguey Chi Chi Capa.

Best of all, most are under $10, save the rarer Del Maguey Pechugay, with its intense smoke and salinity. The tequila list is much longer, with a similar spectrum. (The bar's name, incidentally, doesn't refer to the tequila brand, but rather the Spanish word for boss, although that seems like a confusing choice given the word association.) Like the Sunset Grill downstairs, in the same family of bars, the tap selection here is vast, with some 80 beers to choose from.

Margaritas

Give agave a chance

"The spotlight is on boutique mescals and creative agave cocktails," owner Marc Kadish said in a statement on the opening. "I think our $4 margaritas will be a real crowd-pleaser, but our beer-drinking customers will certainly not be disappointed."

That's probably more likely. The cheap margaritas, and $4 tapas menu are likely to be the biggest draw here.

Although if they can introduce the Allston nightlife crowd to the wider world of agave, like his bars have done with beer over the years it's a welcome change.

The punks remain relevant

Music. Bad Religion guitarist Brian Baker discusses the band's new album, continued popularity and live performances.

Bad Religion's 16th album, "True North," is being heralded as a return to form, harkening back to their style from the late '80s. But guitarist Brian Baker says that's just a "happy accident."

"There's never any conception, any preconceived idea, about what a Bad Religion record is going to be," he says. "The lyrical aggression on this record is what begat the tempos of the short songs."

For 33 years, the band have weathered lineup changes, hiatuses, major labels and mainstream recognition. They have forged a sound that builds upon hardcore punk while adding doses of pop, heavy metal and psychedelia to their insightful and socially conscious lyrics.

Baker attributes the band's longevity to the adventurous songwriting of Brett Gurewitz and Greg Graffin.

"This has never been a band to sort of lay back and try to sell some T-shirts," he says.

Baker says the fans are also a large part of the equation.

"When you have a band with our history, it's nice to be able to play new stuff and have it still be relevant to the audience," he says, "instead of them pacing themselves, waiting to hear 'No Control.'"

But even if it weren't for the fans, the 48-year-old Baker insists he'd still be doing what he does.

"Playing guitar has exactly the same physical rush and emotional intensity it did when I was 15 years old," he says. "It's something I would do if no one came to watch."

This show brings together two heroes of '80s hip-hop. Big Daddy Kane overcame asthma to become one of the fastest rappers of all time — legend has it even the great Rakim didn't dare challenge him. Slick Rick, famous for his eye patch, brought a deeper sense of narrative to the rap game — he's regarded as one of hip-hop's finest storytellers.

Funny money

MLB values surge

Major League Baseball teams are making money hand over fist, but not because of rising attendance or any other typical reasons. According to Forbes, money that all teams made from the 2006 sale of the Montreal Expos was invested in hedge funds and is now worth more than $1 billion.

UP FOR GRABS

Can the Red Sox exceed their relatively low expectations? Are the Yankees finally dead? Will the revamped Blue Jays be able to make the postseason for the first time since the early 1990s? Was the Orioles' 2012 season just a fluke?

METRO'S AL EAST PREDICTIONS

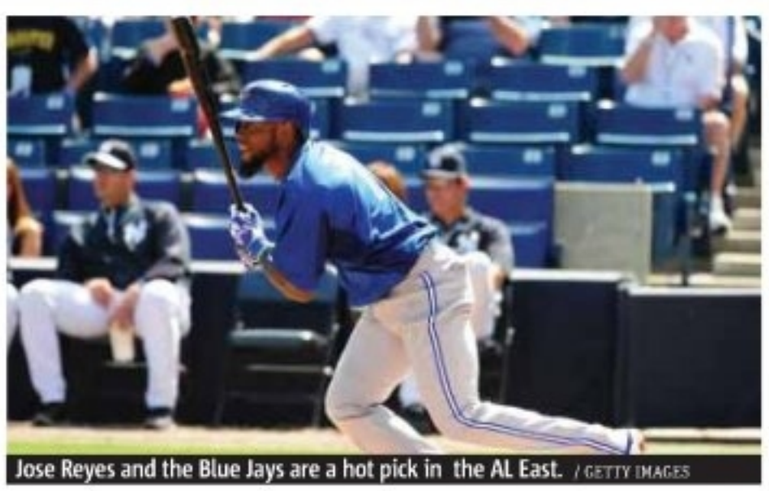
Who will take the AL East?
For the first time in a long time the division is anyone's for the taking, and the usual favorites, the Red Sox and Yankees, are being picked to finish at the bottom by many experts. Here are Metro Boston's AL East predictions for the 2013 season:

Tampa Bay Rays: 90-72,
The Rays didn't make any big splashes this offseason, but it's not like they needed to. They have arguably the best pitching staff in the entire American League in David Price, Jeremy Hellickson, and Matt Moore as well as Fernando Rodney in their bullpen. In what could be the most competitive AL East in recent memory, solid pitching should guide the Rays to the top of the standings.

Boston Red Sox: 87-75
Many people have already written off the Red Sox, a team coming off of a 69-93 season and a last place finish in the division. But 2013 is a new year. The team still has a great deal of talent on the roster in Jacoby Ellsbury, Dustin Pedroia and Will Middlebrooks. The Red Sox also signed Mike Napoli, Jonny Gomes and Shane Victorino this offseason, who bring plenty of leadership to what was thought to be a temperamental clubhouse. As is the key with most teams, the success of the Sox will depend on their starting pitching.

The staff was dreadful in 2012, finishing second to last in the AL in both wins and ERA, but certainly has the talent to lead the team to a playoff spot. Jon Lester and Clay Buchholz have proven in the past what they are capable of.

New York Yankees: 82-80
These Yankees are already behind the eight ball with a number of injuries before the season has even begun. Derek Jeter is hobbled and won't play Opening Day. A strained right wrist will keep first baseman Mark Teixeira out for at least the month of April — same goes for outfielder Curtis Granderson who has a fractured right forearm. Even worse is Alex Rodriguez who will be out until July at the earliest as he comes off of hip surgery. The Yankees starting rotation isn't the same dominant group as in the past. CC Sabathia is coming off of a season where he made just 28 starts, his fewest since 2006. Hiroki Kuroda had a solid 2012, but he is 38 years old — and many questions surround the rest of the staff in Andy Pettitte, Phil Hughes and Michael Pineda.



Jose Reyes and the Blue Jays are a hot pick in the AL East. / GETTY IMAGES

Toronto Blue Jays: 81-81
No team in the division made as many moves this offseason as the Blue Jays. Josh Johnson, Mark Buehrle and Jose Reyes were added from a trade with Miami and the team also signed starter R.A. Dickey. On paper the Blue Jays may be the best team in the division, and will surely improve on their 73-89 season last year, but not by much. It's rare that a baseball team turns things around completely in just one year.

Baltimore Orioles: 78-84
Coming off one of the biggest turnarounds in recent memory and making the playoffs for the first time since 1997 last season, it could just be a "one-year wonder" scenario for the Orioles. Baltimore was an astounding 29-9 in one-run games and won 16 straight extra innings games, but that is highly unlikely for a team to duplicate in back-to-back seasons.

New Red Sox manager John Farrell has kept things relatively quiet this spring. / GETTY IMAGES

Farrell with chance to correct many wrongs of 2012 season

Red Sox. New Sox manager is a link to success of Francona era, but also brings a fresh approach.

When a team goes 69-93 in a given season there are many factors that go into the poor record. This was the case for the 2012 Red Sox and one of those factors was manager Bobby Valentine. Valentine never seemed to have the backing of his team from day one and was never able to get into a comfort zone at any point during the season.

Valentine was fired a day after the season came to an end, and then about a month later, Blue Jays manager John Farrell returned to Boston, where he was the pitching coach for four seasons, to become the 45th manager in Red Sox history.

The Red Sox made a number of acquisitions this offseason but none may be bigger than the addition of Farrell, who will be a familiar face; someone the players respect, trust and are able to openly communicate with.

"The most important thing is that we earn the trust of one another inside the clubhouse first," Farrell said a few weeks back. "And going from there is the style of play that people can identify with this group as a team, and [be] confident that the makeup of the group initially will put ourselves in a position to do that."

One of the biggest issues in 2012 was the pitching staff, and who better than Farrell to come in and turn things around? Farrell was the one who groomed Jon Lester and Clay Buchholz into All-Star-level pitchers in his time with the team in the late 2000s, so obviously he has an inside track on getting them back on track.

Positional players such as Dustin Pedroia and Ortiz saw what Farrell brings to the table, and are familiar to his style. It all starts with the leaders of the team, Pedroia and Ortiz, and if they are on board and trust their manager, the message of "team" should trickle on down.

While a manager cannot be the sole reason for a team only winning 69 games, there were documented incidents last season under Valentine in which communication channels were cut off.

As the Red Sox look to turn the page and begin a new chapter with a new attitude and culture, bringing in a manger the team is familiar with and respects could prove to be the best move of the offseason.

Bradley Jr. gives Sox fans hope

Red Sox. Young outfield sensation Jackie Bradley Jr. is giving Boston baseball fans a reason to believe again.

When those giant trucks filled with gloves, uniforms, bats and balls left Fenway Park en route to Fort Myers, Fla., back on Feb. 5, there was a "believe-it-when-we-see-it" thought from most fans surrounding the entire Red Sox organization.

Those cynical minds have yet to be convinced that Jon Lester [who was officially named the Opening Day starter against the Yankees yesterday], Clay Buchholz, John Lackey and Ryan Dempster will be able to guide the Sox to a successful 2013 season. Optimists have found their non-pitching staff golden boy, however.

Sox sensation

"That's an outfield that has a lot of range and can cover a lot of ground."

Red Sox manager John Farrell to the Boston Herald on having Jacoby Ellsbury, Shane Victorino and Jackie Bradley Jr.

His name is Jackie Bradley Jr. and he will be part of Boston's 2013 season one way or another. Whether or not the outfielder begins the season on the 25-man roster remains to be seen.

"Still working through it and we'd probably like to have some sense who our 25 guys are going to be by the end of the day [today] so we just want to be fair to all going north that they've got a couple days to prepare themselves," Red Sox manager John Farrell told WEEI.com. "We'll see how that goes."

Bradley has a glistening .523 on-base percentage this spring and has more than held his own in the field.

The only reason the Red Sox would not place Bradley Jr. on the Opening Day roster is to ensure that he won't be able to reach free agency until 2019 as opposed to 2018.

Outfielder Mike Carp was on the 40-man roster as of yesterday and a decision on Ryan Sweeney will likely be made today.

WHAT HAPPENS WHEN?

You never redeemed your cell phone rebate? You forgot about a savings account you started? You didn't cash a payroll check?

The State Treasurer oversees more than $2 billion in unclaimed assets of all kinds: forgotten bank accounts, shares of stock, CDs, unpaid wages, insurance proceeds, unclaimed refunds and rebates, and more. If your forgotten asset ended up in our hands, we urge you to claim what's rightfully yours. How? It's Fast, Easy and Free. Just visit www.findmassmoney.com and click on "search for unclaimed property" or call 888-344-MASS(6277).
